

Bulletin — Storm Alert

To All Aerospace Producers:

The 2012 Tropical Storm season has made an early start and several experts have suggested an average season lies ahead. Whether we believe our senses, history or the forecasters, caution is the best approach.

We know that such storms can be devastating, and encourage our policyholders, through our producers, to take the necessary steps to protect their valuable aircraft and respective interests.

You are reminded that Aerospace automatically suspends binding in any county in which either a Hurricane Watch or Warning has been posted until at least 72 hours has elapsed from the time the Watch or Warning has been lifted.

Business which has already been bound by an Aerospace underwriter will remain covered.

During any period of imminent storm danger, we would like to encourage you to get in touch with policyholders – particularly those that may reside in states away from their planes – and suggest that they take precautions to move the aircraft to safer locations while the opportunity exists.

In the event that you find yourself having to evacuate your usual location, we'd also like to remind you that you can obtain coverage information for your business with us through Aerospace's website, www.aerospaceim.com, from any location from which you may access the web. Remember to bring your Aerospace password with you in case you should need to conduct operations away from your usual office. You may also report claims and/or email our staff from our site.

This Bulletin may also be viewed in the Producer section of our website.

May 29, 2012

Any Questions or Concerns?

If you have any questions or concerns, please either email us directly back, or contact the appropriate office below.

Aerospace Insurance Managers, Inc
15280 Addison Road Suite 250 | Addison, Texas 75001
Tel. (972) 852-1200 Fax. (972) 852-1212

221 East Glenoaks Blvd., Suite 150 | Glendale, CA 97202-2089
Tel. (818) 547-1400 Fax. (818) 547-3800